

With the requirement that all local broadcasters leap to digital, it only makes sense that the smaller ones be able to "band together" under a single owner to avoid having to spend additional millions in the smallest markets for digital upgrade. The payback in the smallest markets is measured in decades unless duopolies can save these important members of local communities.